Colleagues, you are undoubtedly monitoring the news stories related to the Coronavirus and the increasing levels of concern that the threat for the US appears to be increasing, likewise, are campuses are actively monitoring CDC updates and advice. While it is likely that we would have some advance warning via outbreaks in other areas of the country first, such as NY, I did want to share with you that I have heard from all four of our institutions and they all have protocols in place and are actively planning for various scenarios, including the potential closing of campuses. The newly formed Communications and Marketing Executive Council is also meeting to discuss communication plans for students, the press, and others. Presidents will plan to speak more specifically to those efforts at the next Executive Committee, assuming the threat level does not significantly rise before then and warrant the implementation of more extreme actions and updates.

Best,

Todd
